

2.0 Summary Table of Mitigation Proposals

This section represents a summary of the information detailed in section 3.0 below. Note that some site numbers have been grouped. This has been done where the individual 'sites' in fact group as part of one complex or unit of related buildings/features, such as the Falfield Mills, whose individual buildings were previously listed separately. In such a case, the site numbers are entered within one cell, with grouped numbers in brackets, as with '39 (40, 41, 49, 118)'. Groups have also been formed where one site physically overlies another, and therefore where the two sites will in fact only be subject to one excavation. Such groups are indicated as in the example '51 = 85'.

Where the symbol * appears in the 'mitigation proposed' column, this indicates that the current proposed mitigation differs from that proposed in the initial evaluation report of 2003. This occurs, for example, because several small excavations have been lumped together as one (as one site in fact overlies another), reducing the number of interventions proposed. In other cases, further consideration of the mitigation programme during the current phase of work has led to a change in the type of mitigation recommended. Brief comments on the changes can be found in the 'comments' column below, and more details are given in the relevant individual site entries in section 3.0.

Where * appears against a site number, this means that the assessment of the significance of the site has changed, on the basis of new information. The individual site entries in section 3.0 should be referred to for further details.
